summer music festival

Music under the stars has been for the last three years, one of the genuine delights of summer in Austin, and this year will find some talented people serving it up during the fourth annual KHFI-FM Summer Music Festival, getting under way Monday night at the Zilker Hillside Theater. Among the performers on the 1967 bill are Townes Van Zant (left), a headliner on the opening folk concert; Fernando Herrera (right), a versatile flamenco and classical guitarist who'll be an added attraction on the choral music program; and the big Ed Gerlach orchestra (below), which will be featured in a "Salute to the Big Bands" show. All together, the festival will offer six full nights of diversified musical entertainment—and all for free.
