MOMENT OF TRUTH — Jane Fonda clutches her young son in near-hysterical grief, dreading one of the many moments of explosive action in "Hurry Sundown," a movie about racial conflict in the post-WWII South. On view at the Paramount, the Otto Preminger vehicle also stars Michael Caine as Miss Fonda's husband, a greedy landowner who brings much grief to the film's other principals—John Phillip Law, Faye Dunaway, Robert Hooks, Diahann Carroll and Rex Ingram—and finally, to himself.

At UT Crew Backs Up 'Antigone'

Drama students at the University of Texas are busy preparing for the opening of the summer season at the "Antigone." While the actors are in rehearsal, the production staff is readying the set, costumes and lights for the show which opens June 20th.

The costumes designed by the Paul Rothberg, are sewn and cared for by the costume crew. Maggie Bidout is crew head with Susan Bizzot, Virginia Hill, Rodene Johnson, and Cynthia Weyand assisting her. Pat Moore and his co-workers, Edwin Neal, Margaret Manti and Gordon Hadza are erecting the lighting designs of David Nancarrow, Assistant Professor of Drama.

John Rothberg, set designer, will see his designs come to life due to the efforts of the building and stage crew. Don McCune is crew head and his crew consists of Tom Knox, James Isaly, Mike Solderman, Suzanne Crumley, William Weatherford, William Alexander, Albert Kennedy, Mary Frances Rothe, and Janice Miller.

Property crew head is Edge Lou Hook. Assisting her are Gail Gestrow, Max Biegr, Samuel Red, Louise Hammon, Marcia Reed, and Sandra Buesenfeld.
